

Don't Fry Day™ Use Guidelines

The National Council on Skin Cancer Prevention (NCSCP) designated the Friday before Memorial Day as “Don't Fry Day” to raise awareness of skin cancer prevention and to encourage everyone throughout the United States to protect their skin while enjoying the outdoors.

The NCSCP welcomes the participation of not-for-profit organizations, government agencies, associations, and educators to promote the Don't Fry Day campaign to encourage sun-safety and skin cancer prevention behaviors.

The NCSCP is committed to being recognized as an organization with a strong and trusted national image and reputation with health, environmental, and educational organizations, as well as the general public. When people see the NCSCP brand, they expect information and programs that are scientifically accurate, resourceful, and relevant. The NCSCP brand conveys credibility, competence, and leadership.

Endorsement Guidelines for Don't Fry Day™

1. NCSCP does not endorse any specific commercial products, processes, services, or activities by trade name, trade mark, manufacturer, or otherwise.
2. NCSCP members may give opinions or make endorsements solely in their own capacity.
3. If any NCSCP member who gives such opinions or endorsements are identified as connected with NCSCP, there should be some additional statement to the effect that the views and endorsements represented are not those of NCSCP.
4. When the Don't Fry Day logo is approved with use by agreement on any commercial promotional material, the following statement must be included under the Don't Fry Day logo, “The National Council on Skin Cancer Prevention does not endorse or recommend any commercial products or services.”
